William F. Buckley, Jr. Program at Yale 2014-2015 Mid-Academic Year Report

Dear Friend,

Another exciting semester is underway for the William F. Buckley, Jr. Program at Yale. As we begin what promises to be a busy few months, I wanted to bring you up to speed on some of the highlights of the 2014-2015 academic year.

There's no doubt that a critical moment for the Buckley Program in the fall semester centered on our hosting of the courageous activist Ayaan Hirsi Ali. In spite of attempts to silence Ms. Hirsi Ali, free expression carried the day, with over three hundred people filling up one of the largest lecture halls on campus. We even had to turn away hundreds more due to lack of space.

If this serves as any indication, it's safe to say that there's a demand for different points of view in higher education, and we are pleased to provide just that. I hope you'll take the time to learn more about the many forums for intellectual diversity that we offered last semester as well as what we have in store for this coming semester.

In other good news, our Student Fellows Program has expanded to 120 students. These students enjoy opportunities to meet with guest speakers over a meal, attend subsidized conferences, and more.

Even off campus, our impact continues to grow. C-SPAN Book TV covered our fourth annual conference on James Burnham's Suicide of the West, and thousands of viewers have watched our lectures, debates, and panels through our YouTube channel.

Of course, none of our efforts would be possible without the support of our donors. Fortunately, 2014 was a record year for us in this area, with 538 individuals and foundations stepping up for our cause. We are deeply grateful for your generosity.

I hope we can continue to earn your support in 2015 and that you will be able to join us for our upcoming Disinvitation Dinner in New York City or one of the many events we have coming up in New Haven.

Please feel free to contact me at Lauren@BuckleyProgram.com with any questions or comments about our programs. I look forward to keeping you updated on our activities.

Sincerely,

Lauren Noble
Founder and Executive Director
